Paul Gregory

Paul Gregory started playing guitar at the age of 10. Later he also studied cello and composition in London. He gave his Wigmore Hall debut when 19.

Three years later he won the Andres Segovia International Competition in Spain.

Paul has made BBC Radio 3 programmes, including live broadcasts from the NTL Studio in Belfast, the Wigmore Hall and from Broadcasting House.

Paul has been a visiting professor to the Royal Irish Academy and for ten years Chief External Examiner at the Scottish Conservatoire.

More recently he has been invited to give masterclasses at RCM and Trinity Laban.

Locally, Paul is a founder member to New Music Brighton and the Lunchtime Concerts at the Chapel Royal Brighton.

In 2002 he set up a guitar distribution company Maestoso Music, providing many of the best music shops with carefully selected instruments.

He has played a number of times at Christchurch and is a personal fan of the acoustics, atmosphere and lovely people.....

'A mature and accomplished soloist.' The Daily Telegraph

'Dedicated, impassioned, shaped with care and feeling.' The Financial Times

'A model of polish and accuracy' The Strad

'If it is possible Paul Gregory has wound another notch up the scale of guitar masters' Classical Guitar
